Hello,

I created two limited fundraiser t-shirts that cost $29 each. I thought of a unique way to raise funds to support accessibility efforts without necessarily impacting organic sales on the convention floor for your preferred vendor. What do you think?

Both items have disclaimers discussing profit and donations.

<https://made-in-ny-shop.fourthwall.com/products/u-s-s-long-island-blueprint-tee>

With each sale, $10 is donated to Trek Long Island to support accessibility efforts. No profit is made on this item.

My art director is working on some art for the t shirts. I would very much get sued if I used the star trek logo or anything that is related to the show.

I'll let you know when he has something done

It looks like most of that is fine. We just have to remove the star trek logo, and I think the ship would have to change a whole bunch.

Thanks 😊

Sorry. I was driving (at a light) and I hit send too fast on the last email lol

Hey there.

I updated the design for the shirt.

No worries - it was a spur of the moment thing.

Lol i'm trying to get her just to stop by this year. And say hi, but maybe next year I'll get her as a guest.

I really like the long island one. It's really cool. I think the star trek logos the only thing that's really paramount illegal.

I'm looking at all this on my phone. Are they two different shirts?

Refresh the page, I removed the delta from the ship design and the Risa planet. No direct IP logos are present.

All Trek shirts will have 5% to the nonprofit (Library of Kindness) and $10 to Trek Long Island.

Let's start with the long island one. People really connect with that even if they're not going to the convention. Long island people stick together and love things that represent them. Believe me, i'm one of them I o l.

The other t shirt is that mostly AI? We want to be careful with that. Because I do have an artist on staff that can create something very similar. It might be a better idea for me to contact him and ask him to take that. Image and use it as inspiration.

I am the original creator of both works. No AI was used. Thanks -

I pre-purposed PSDs files (photoshop) from high school and college— and I then added other layers. I did design work for Otto Literature Magazine at Tunxis Community College years ago.

No need— thanks though. I would just focus on this new 'away mission' or something like that.

Let's focus on other designs we can offer at the convention and post to appreciate our fans.

The android app is coming along nicely.

I added room queuing that can be turned on and off to the iPhone app last night.

I want to be careful not to step on my art director's feet. He's doing the convention t shirts and the shirts for the twin moons lounge. Can you put him in touch with you. That way there would be no issues.

Of course!

My focus with these two are special editions and not to redirect general volume at the convention. This can also be a pathway for his designs too.

True.

I can be very transparent with him in terms of volume so if he gets a royalty per print of his design printed, he knows that exactly.

We can also set up a complete separate online presence too.

I just spoke to them. They're actually curious to know how you made the island with the layers. I have no idea how it works. So I figure I'd ask

I really want to avoid anything that looks like a I associated with the convention, so maybe leave tli off on that one.

I am replying to:

Photoshop uses layers like stacked sheets of paper. So once I made one patch of the squiggles; I copied that layer again and again. I then moved it over and stretched it across a big picture of Long Island to get the shape. I then used the smug tool.

I really want to avoid anything that looks like a I associated with the convention, so maybe leave tli off on that one.

I removed the Trek Long Island from the left arm of the USS Long Island T-shirt design. I am a bit confused as this is tentatively official convention merchandise.

The two tee shirts are the following:

- 1) <https://made-in-ny-shop.fourthwall.com/products/u-s-s-long-island-blueprint-tee>
- 2) <https://made-in-ny-shop.fourthwall.com/products/what-happens-on-risa>

No mean I don't think i can sell a I generated merchandise. A lot of the other conventions had some really big issues with it and a lot of complaints from the fans and attendees.

I don't think there will be a problem with the long island one is the Risa one. I know it's going to become a huge war between people saying it's a I and you saying, it's not.

So the long island one is totally cool to have tli represented, but the other one I think would cause a major thing that I don't think anyone wants to deal with.

This merchandise is not AI-generated, and I resent the implication, just like the app - I spent actual time on it. I have the actual PSD (photoshop) files for everything I created.

I value professional workmanship and my own IP. For me it is professional integrity.

I have not made any money from producing the IOS app, the Android app, or the two proposed tee-shirt designs. If you dislike that I used the same account for my other iOS Apps as I did for my t-shirts, I can move it to a preserved account, 'treklongisland,' with that vendor.

Please find a different person to build next year's app and to identify ways to generate income for the convention. It's one thing to hold an opinion and another to act on it.

Well you don't have to deal with me moving forward. I will commit to what was already established but don't expect me to volunteer my time any more.

Yes, I think it's better just to focus on the app. Because my art director is getting super upset. I think he feels like he's being pushed aside. It's causing a lot of tension between me and him

That's not my problem.

The iOS (Apple) App was already published. I can gladly refund the remaining money and part ways completely.

I don't appreciate having my art called AI. I don't appreciate having my work product called into question.

That's fine.If you wanna refund the money. You can also take down the app if you want.I don't wanna cause any issues with you.

Just to be clear, though, I never asked you to create t shirts. This is something you took on yourself.

That is correct - I was never asked to create the t-shirts but I saw an opportunity to fulfill a guest request. I don't like when people call my product AI. That was an insult. The implied contract was fulfilled for the Apple iOS app portion. The outstanding deliverable is the android app. I will gladly refund the remaining $150 because I severely undervalued my deliverables.

Remember, you need to refund the $1500 to the sponsor.

If I take down the app - you will need to explain why and just be very careful as it could become litigious regarding to defamation.

Will do.

You insulted me and my art and my professional integrity without any evidence.

If I delete the iOS app— you will need to refund the $1500 to the app sponsor. Are you willing to incur that?
