Hello,

You breached any and all implied contracts when:

- 1) You accused me of using AI in materials, particularly merchandise designed to generate revenue for the sponsor organization. A false and potentially liable claim. (I have the PSD (Photoshop) files to disprove that). (breach of implied contract).
- 2) Created an opportunity to potentially further accuse the developer of using AI in coding materials. (falsehood; and professional malice)
- 2) Demanded that I return the proceeds, effectively negating my labor and work product. (act of bad faith)
- 3) Delisted me from the staff on the Trek Long Island website (an act of bad faith)
- 4) Removed the ability to attend the convention as staff using a voided staff voucher (act of bad faith)
- 4) You paid an unreasonable and unrealistic amount for the coding services rendered for either platform. Why should anyone be disrespected, as the email chains illustrate?

- 5) Forced the developer to absorb platform listing fees ($210) because you demanded the return of advance proceeds. (Damages)

I have relisted the app after adjusting its availability, as I retained full ownership rights to both the Android and Apple iOS versions, and I added the following disclaimer:

"This is an unofficial convention companion app because the compensation for application coding did not reflect the full scope of work (95+ hours), and the organizer did not allocate sponsor fundraising appropriately. The organizer raised $1500 for each platform, netting at least $570, but the developer was paid only $150 per instance. Support fair pay for fair work." Disclaimer will remain until equitable resolution. The fans should not suffer because of poor business dealings.

You received the following sponsorship and are still listing the promotional sponsorship today via Instagram.

Math:

Apple IOS Platform (Sponsorship Acquired: Transporter Room)

$1500 platform sponsorship

-350 - Tabling

-280 Tickets to sponsor

870.00

-300 - prepayment to developer

=====

570.00 remaining

Android Platform:

$1500 platform sponsorship

-350 - Tabling

-280 Tickets to sponsor

870.00 remaining

I welcome it.

I also reached out to Chris and informed him how the sponsorship funds were poorly allocated.
